

Ajalaa meaning the `mother earth' in Sanskrit , is an urban social infrastructure proposal specific to inclusion of vulnerable groups ie. women , children , senior citizens for care and to be productive. Conceptualized in the background of the rising crime and violence in our cities and to lessen domestic violence , the concept went on to weave in a number aspects, which ended in an integrated , highly visible one window approach to issues pertaining to the target group.

Envisaged as multifacilitation single umbrella structures in a city& its suburbs which combine a plethora of facilities classified as : Crisis intervention & short stay support , Residential, Recreational, Informational, Health & Commercial services.

All state capitals including major cities, would have a Ajalaa Complexes within each electoral constituency connected to a central Ajalaa district as part of a cohesive countrywide network , under the brand Ajalaa.

Viability : But for the initial support in terms of funding , land , Ajalaa with its' wide range of quality, affordable services will be self sustaining , income generating . Catering to different economic capacities , additional funds generated by high end users will support / facilitate those from the lower income group.

Implementation : The Ajalaa projects are proposed to be implemented by a consortium, which would draw in the very best from the N.G.O and the Corporate sector. The Nodal umbrella agency would act as an interface between the government and the consortium .
